Guidance on whether to request an inquest

---

1. It is a common misunderstanding that every death reported to a coroner is the subject of an inquest (public hearing). Inquests are only a part of a coronial investigation and account for approximately 5% of the deaths reported each year.
2. The Coroners Act 2008 provides that, unless where a death is considered to be due to natural causes, it is mandatory for a coroner to hold an inquest into the death if the death or cause of death occurred in Victoria and:
  - a. a coroner suspects the death was as a result of homicide; or
  - b. the deceased was, immediately before death, a person placed in custody or care; or
  - c. the identity of the deceased is unknown.
3. It is important to note that regardless of whether a public hearing is held, a coroner must conduct a coronial investigation into:
  - a. all reportable and reviewable deaths and make findings, if possible, as to the identity of the deceased, the medical cause of death and where appropriate the circumstances in which the death occurred;
  - b. where appropriate under the Coroners Act 2008, a fire and make findings, if possible, as to the cause and origin of the fire and the circumstances in which the fire occurred.
4. As a result of their investigation, the coroner may also comment or make recommendations on any matter connected with a death or fire, including matters relating to public health and safety or the administration of justice.<sup>1</sup> As the power to comment or make recommendations is incidental to the obligation to make findings, a coroner is not permitted to conduct an inquest for the sole or dominant purpose of making comment or recommendations.<sup>2</sup>
5. In any matter where it is not mandatory to hold an inquest, the decision whether or not to hold an inquest is at the discretion of the coroner handling the investigation.
6. Whilst none of the following factors are determinative of the matter, a coroner may take into account the following factors in deciding whether or not to hold an inquest:
  - whether the medical cause of death cannot be established without holding an inquest (e.g. uncertainty or conflicting expert opinions about the cause of death);
  - whether the circumstances in which the death occurred cannot be established without holding an inquest;
  - whether there is such uncertainty or conflict of evidence as to justify the use of the judicial forensic process;
  - the efficient use of the resources available to a coroner; including whether there have been any other similar inquiries and investigations by other investigative authorities, official bodies or statutory authorities;
  - whether all the relevant public issues relating to the death have been canvassed by the criminal law judicial process;

- whether an inquest is likely to assist in maintaining public confidence in the administration of justice, health services or other public agencies;
  - whether an inquest is likely to uncover systemic defects or risks not already known;
  - whether an inquest is likely to provide additional information that has not already been disclosed by information available to the coroner during their investigation;
  - that a death, when grouped with other deaths that have occurred in similar circumstances, indicates that there may be an unexpected increase in danger in a particular location, area, family, industry or activity;
  - that there has been an incident involving multiple deaths;
  - that it is not possible to exclude the involvement of a third party in procuring the death or in failing to prevent it;
  - that an inquest will provide the opportunity to compel a witness to give evidence, using section 57 of the Act;
  - whether an inquest may help to prevent other similar deaths;
  - whether restorative and/or preventative measures have been implemented in response to a death;
  - whether previous inquests have dealt with similar deaths and made recommendations for reform that have not been adopted;
  - whether drawing attention to the death may increase the risk of similar deaths,
  - the emotional burden that holding an inquest would place on relatives and other participants;
  - whether a coroner is considering making an adverse comment against a person or institution;
  - any other matter the coroner considers relevant.
7. A coroner should not allow an inquest to be used for an improper purpose. An inquest is not an opportunity:
- to investigate possible criminal conduct and compile a brief of evidence in preparation for a future criminal trial;
  - for family members to perpetuate a family dispute;
  - to gather or test evidence solely in preparation for a civil claim;
  - to use the inquest as a ‘political platform’ to advance a particular cause or to make damaging or baseless allegations not relevant to the coronial function.
